Website Design Task 3

Evaluation and Peer Feedback

Self-Evaluation against user person (Bongo)—

First impressions (the home page)-

My first impression of the site is "interesting but on a school budget". The site features lots of pictures and interaction. while attempting depth, contrast and organization with its assets and layouts.

The sectioned layout creates interest and organization, yet does not hinder readability. Alignment of images and elements it's also consistent yet varied throughout the page keeping interest while not being too disorienting. All elements of the site (button, links, ect…) are labeled in a self explanatory manner, making navigation easier.

Weaknesses and feedbacks—

Some pages and areas feel empty, unfinished and/or rushed, as if they were hastily put together, or that they had been left unpolished. This doesn't make these pages or areas unusable; it simply makes them feel lackluster and somewhat disappointing.
The main victims of this are the "news section" on the main page and the "About us" page.
You can see this effect in the other pages as well but it's less outrageous, as there is at least an attempt to create interest .

Furthermore, a completely outrageous mistake is the text in certain containers, breaking out of the container while you are hovering over it.
It is an odd mistake and sometimes hard to see but it is definitely there.

Positive remarks—organization is the website's biggest strength, everything makes sense and flows the way you would expect. All links and buttons function as expected and lead to the correct pages. I was able to easily and efficiently find anything I would need.

 (even though the only things on the site are things I would need)

The interactability, and hover effects are also a nice addition to the site. It is both a practical and aesthetic feature. As it helps clearly indicate what can be interacted with, while also helping keep the site from feeling stagnant and uninteresting.

Final takeaways—

Although the site has many flaws, it is functional and has many touches of interest.

Peer Review—

My first impression on her website is the promotion of Mcast like the handbook, green environment. I like the arrows are low opacity. The website has information which is important to know about campus. The map showing the school campuses for each. News about events that happened underneath the image to know what all is about. The contact section showing a neat and organisation of the contact. I like they are even and aligned to show perfection. The about us it plain I wish it has colours to it, to show that it is from Mcast, information good but needs improvement. The courses section is neat the only downside is that it doesn't have the name of the institute, still it is mostly good for the part. The institute of Creatives Arts has all of the courses related to it making it like an exclusive course to the institute, the table is neat and organised
